25, were found dead in a buggy here early to-day. The vehicle, drawn by a horse about whose heels the reins were dragging, was seen by a policeman to pass aimlessly down 21st street and at the corner of Central the animal stopped. The officer investigated and found the couple dead on the seat Stitt's arm about the girl's neck. The lips and mouths of both were burned with acid.

On investigation the police learned that Stitt hired the horse and buggy last night and took the girl for a ride. He persuaded her to drink whiskey in which, the police say, he had put a large quantity of carbolic acid. After she had taken the fatal dose he swal-lowed the remainder of the poisoned

INSPECTING SEWERS

The aldermanic sewer committee is making a tour of the city this afternoon to investigate about 20 petitions which have been received for new sewers. The most important matter before the committee is relative to the extension of the outlet of the Meadow street trunk sewer which passes through the process on two counts for violating the city ordinances governing the sale of veal. Dr. Knapp, meat and milk inspector of the board of health found a veal carcass hanging in Weintraub's market last Monday. The carcass had not been branded either by the local or Federal inspectors. Weintraub was represented by Attorney Cohn and he made a good though fruitless defense. The accused said that he recognized the fact that the calf was not sale-able and did not intend to sell it. He had cut off a slice and had given it to a dog.

Dr. Knapp testified that the calf could not have weighed over 40 pounds when it was killed and that it was but

Mayor Lee was in Hartford to-day: He will not announce bis appointments to the committee which is to investigate the Board of Charities or the committee on the Central avenue smoke pulsances until the morrow.

A could not have weighed over 40 pounds when it was killed and that it was but little over a week old. It was a case of bob veal. Federal Inspector John F. Riemer saw the carcass and testified that it was the rankest spectmen of bob veal he had ever seen. The prosecution comes out of the determination of the health board to stop the practice of selling bob veal in this city. Weintraub testified that the carcass was brought to his market during his absence by a farmer named Weinstein who lives in Huntington.

The fine and costs will amount to something like 340 which is the severest penalty inflicted for violation of the meat inspection ordinances. Atthe meat inspection ordinances. At-torney Cohn appealed the case for his client and Weintraub gave a bond of Senate. As a result of his interesting tifts with Chairman Aldrich yesterday, should know of the excelthe gaileries were closely packed before Vice-President Sherman called the senate to order at 11 o'clock.

"When the session closed yesterday," Mr. Dolliver said, "I was making considerable progress toward proving that substantial, unknown and unknowable advances had been made in the cotton schedule by the Senate committee. The day closed with a somewhat hurried and excited statement of the Senator from Rhode Island (Aldrich) that it would be shown that no changes had been made. The fact is, the phrase-clogy and the framework of the cotton schedules have been so changed as to make serious differences in rates, plenty of them in the wrong direction." the galleries were closely packed be- lence of these corsets. Now ty of them in the wrong direction."

Dolliver said that Aldrich had threatened to disparage him by printing in the Record arguments similar to his, that were made by two Democratic Senators, Jones and Vest, a dozen years ago. Dolliver added that if it was true that Vest had found the same defects in the mysterious schedules then, that Dolliver had found by hard study now, it would be a compliment, because few greater men than Vest had ever sat in the Senate. He continued:

"I object to these amendments. We are told that they originated in the customs offices in New York. If that were true, it would be a sad commentary on the senate, but it is not true. Long before the senate committee was tary on the senate, but it is not true Long before the senate committee was appointed manufacturers had submit-ted these schedules to the house com-mittee, asserting that they had been O. K.'d by the government inspectors in New York."

He had been sneered at, Dolliver said, because he had sought advice and information about these schedules. Aldrich's sneering was not only un-called for but absurd, in view of the fact that he had read to the senate re-ports made by experts that "fill the marble corridors of the palace where we have our offices."
